Moving to the new Blogger in beta

allanahk@hotmail.com

 First you need a Google account. Go to www.gmail.com and get one. Then log in to your Blogger account and find this feature. Learn more.

2. There are four things to remember......

Want to switch?

Three things you need to know:

You'll need a Google Account

After you sign in with your Blogger account, you can create a Google Account or link to your existing one. More about Google Accounts

We're still adding features

Some features aren't part of the beta yet, but will be in an upcoming release. See what's missing

Third-party applications need to update

External websites and applications that post to Blogger may need to update to post to the beta. Check with the developer of any third-party app that you rely on before switching.

You can't "undo"

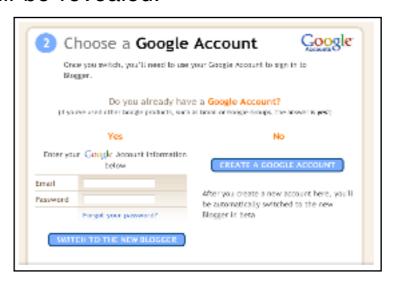

Your blogs and profile will stay the same but you can't go back to the old Blogger application.

- (a) You need a handy Google account
- (b) They are still adding features.
- (c) You will have to redo any customisations you have added.
- (d) If you don't like it you can't go back!

3. Sign in to your Blogger account.

4. Put in your new gmail address and password and all will be revealed.

5. Wait a bit and you will get to the dashboard from which you can navigate Blogger. You can personalise the settings- time, comment moderation and layout.

6. Click any section to personalise how you want your blog to look. Then you can move the right hand items and change their order on your blog.
